As part of the ongoing development and the launch of the new business brand of InterCulture we aim to present a conference and develop an innovative launch programme in June 2007 called Connecting Enterprising Women in partnership with The National Year of Diversity and The School of Performance and Cultural Industries, Leeds University. The aim to create an informal but strategic structure of women from the 'grass roots' communities forming a 'hub' of diverse entrepreneurial women currently not involved in any of the key sectors or organisations in the region. This may be for cultural reasons but we would like to create opportunities to make a difference in their lives by forming CEW. The event aims to bring together for the first time key female enterprises and organisations currently facilitating communication and networking opportunities. We are keen to present case studies of success stories, develop a role model structure and encourage future enterprise in the region. We would like to host 3 networking events over the next year and establish a forum and focus group with key women of diversity in the region.
